The Honorable William J. Casey
Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, DC 20505

Dear Bill:

At a recent Fordham Alumni gathering in Washington I met a young woman whom I had known while she was an undergraduate at Fordham. She later obtained her Ph.D. in philosophy here. She is a very bright young woman.

To my surprise she told me that she was seeking a position with the Central Intelligence Agency.

I have not been asked to write a letter of recommendation but I recall our meeting several years ago when you told our small group of university presidents that the Agency was eager to recruit bright young Ph.D.'s. This is my first and, in view of my impending retirement at the end of the month, probably my last opportunity to bring such a candidate to your attention.

The young woman is:

Dear Bill:

I am enclosing the resume of [redacted] in the hopes that you might pass it on to someone who would be able to help her in her quest for an entry-level position with the CIA.

STAT

I know this is a request you get many times, Bill, and I hesitated to send it to you. However, [redacted] is an unusual girl with an intense curiosity in the world around her and a burning desire to become an analyst in the Central Intelligence Agency.

STAT

[redacted] has written several letters on her own, and has thus far received no response. She has also written to someone whom [redacted] suggested, but again has received no word. Anything you can do to help, Bill, would be greatly appreciated.

I hope somehow you can provide some help during the campaign -- God knows it appears they need it. If you are visiting New York, Bill, please let me know as I would like to chat with you.

Warmest personal regards,
